THE PROBLEM & THE SOLUTION

There are 71 million orphans in Asia (UNICEF) many of whom are growing up in institutions. Such residential care is "crippling children's potential and limiting their future" as well as "restricting national, economic, political and social growth" (Families Not Orphanages, 2010)

As many Asian governments do not have a viable alternative to institutional care for orphaned and abandoned children, it becomes the care method of choice, despite general professional consensus that it can be developmentally damaging for the children.

"The millions of children who live in orphanages and other forms of residential care are among the most vulnerable in the world"

Save the Children 2009

The Solution:

The solution is to place children into good, local families. The loving support of a family can provide a child security, food, water, sanitation, education, health, stimulation and nurture. Family placement is a holistic approach to transforming the lives of disadvantaged orphans.

As Care for Children introduces family placement care, we give the most disadvantaged children a chance to develop into independent adults who can make a positive contribution to their community.

Children need families to not only survive, but to thrive.

OUR STRATEGY

- 1. We develop and demonstrate replicable local family placement programs carried out by local staff who place children into local families
- 2. We commit seed funding, matched by the local government, to kickstart a national shift towards family placement care as an alternative to institutional care
- 3. We have a team of experts who provide on-site training to walk family placement workers through their first placements, as well as offering on-going monitoring and support, and regular regional and national training workshops
- 4. We always work at the invitation of the national government, with a local government partner and matched government funding

1. Strategic Work in partnership with government orthorites

2. Developmental Establish grassroots projects through local institutions

3. Sustainable Train & equip local staff to become family placement

Family placement A solution that addresses the holistic needs of children

CHINA

In 2012 Care for Children signed a new three-year project agreement with the government to work in 30 project sites, with a greater emphasis on the poorer, western provinces of China where family-based care has yet to be developed. 10 of those sites are previously trained sites that will become part of a research project, the other 20 will receive focused training on developing family placement.

China's traditional social structure is ideal for substitute family placement with strong nuclear and extended families and strong community support. Furthermore, there are many one-child families in want of a second child, or families where their son/daughter is now grown and they are looking to raise further children with their time and experience.

Care for Children has been working in China for over 15 years, training over 250 institutions in family placement, resulting in over 250,000 children being placed into families. There are still as many as 3 million children that need to be placed into substitute families, with many cities that are yet to introduce family placement care.

Project plan for the new project agreement:

		1 1 0
Country	Project Sites	Family Placement Allowances Funded	Family Placement Workers Directly Trained	Children's Lives Affected
China	30	1,600	200	80,000

North East Asia

With invitations to develop family placement in Mongolia and DPRK, Bejing will serve as a training hub for the Northern Asia region in the future.

"Thank you very much for providing us such a valuable learning opportunity. Through your training I finally came to understand that the institutional environment is not good for children, where there are no opportunities for the child to form close relationships with any specific adults.

Family is the best place for a child to grow up.

Now I realise how significant my work is as I am transforming children's lives".

THAILAND

Thailand

Established in 2012, the Thailand project is Care for Children's first project outside of China. Our pilot project is in Chiang Mai, working out of the Chiang Mai Home For Boys.

There are hundreds of small organisations or NGOs working with orphans in Thailand, but Care for Children is the only organisation working in partnership with the government to develop family placement care in line with their national policies.

The government in Thailand recognises and endorses the power of the family to positively shape community, and recently launched a campaign to promote the family as "a sanctuary of love, warmth and care."

Our goal is to establish a model of best practice in Chiang Mai that can be replicated throughout the country. Some of the immediate priorities include translating and then indigenising Care for Children's core training materials into Thai (2-3 years), and developing our Thai training team.

Goals for 2013-2016 in Thailand:

Country	Project Sites	Family Placement Allowances Funded	Family Placement Workers Directly Trained	Children's Lives Affected
Thailand	15	300	150	9,000

South East Asia

As we continue to receive invitations to replicate the successful China model across Asia, Care for Children is looking to build a training team in Thailand, using Chiang Mai as a training hub for family placement in South East Asia.

Care for Children is the only organisation working in partnership with the government to develop family placement care in line with their national policies.

The training is very useful for our job. I recommended that we should have several training workshops per year from Care for Children!

PIONEERING TRACK RECORD

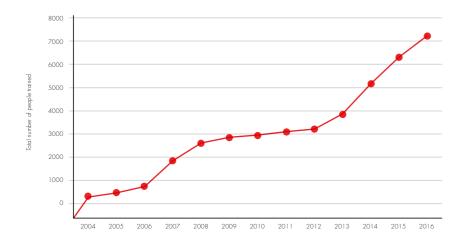

Care for Children pioneered professional care in China by launching a remarkably successful pilot project in Shanghai in 1998 with a goal to place 3000 children into local families.

To date, Care for Children's National Foster Care Project in China has worked with 56 project sites, training more than 3,000 orphanage directors, family placement workers and carers, and enabling over 250,000 orphans in China to grow up in good, local families.
